Investment at Cork Airport International Hotel

Last Thursday we attended the opening of Cork's newest Bar and Bistro, located at Cork International Airport Hotel.

More than one hundred guests, locals and members of the business community gathered on what was also the last function attended by outgoing Lord Mayor Fine Gael Cllr John Buttimer.

Themed in New York style, the latest addition to the Cork International Airport Hotel, was brimming with glitz and glamour as guests really got into a New York state of mind! Executive Head Chef, Hugh Bailey served up a mouth-watering display of Big Apple inspired creations while guests treated to a Prosecco reception, New York Berry cocktails, Rat Pack entertainment and goodie bags on departure. The New Yorker Bar has an excellent array of artisan and locally produced food items on its menu and boasts an extensive selection of wines, spirits, whiskeys and cocktails from the four corners of the globe. Aaron Mansworth, General Manager at The Cork International Airport Hotel was thrilled to see the success of "The New Yorker" opening. In addition to the New Yorker Bar, the hotel recently launched its 'Lobby Lunch' which runs from 12.30pm-3.30pm on Sundays.

The buffet offers guests and locals alike a selection of starters, soup, carvery specials, dessert buffet and a special selection of healthy options for children. The 'Lobby Lunch' is available at a rate of €25 for adults and €5 per head for each child.
